URBAN RENEWAL AND RESISTANCE: RACE, SPACE, AND THE CITY IN THE LATE TWENTIETH TO EARLY TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

BY MARY E. TRIECE

A robust, rigorous, and critical examination of the often unexamined impact of the color-blind, neoliberal paradigm in defining urban landscapes. Useful for understanding urban space, race, and the Black Lives Matter Movement.

— George Yip, *Founding Professor and Dean, Communication Foundations

"In Urban Renewal and Resistance, Mary E. Triece deftly analyzes the voices and experiences of those marginalized by America's racially approving and exclusionary urban landscapes. She shows how African American urban residents suffered gentrification-driven displacement in post-bankrupt toxic exposure hotspots, and how they organized, spoke up, and fighting back." — Shirley Mitchell, *Black Panther Party

— Steve Mason, *Nation Central

ABOUT THE BOOK

Urban Renewal and Resistance: Race, Space, and the City in the Late Twentieth to Early Twenty-First Century examines the ways in which rhetorically constructed, dominant discourses that variously justify or resist processes of urban growth and renewal.

Mary E. Triece is professor of communication studies at the University of Akron.
